OPEN DAY: DISCOVER ENGLISH FOR URBAN STUDIES

ON THE OCCASION OF INTERNATIONAL MOTHER LANGUAGE DAY

On the occasion of International Mother Language Day and of globalization of knowledge and internationalization of education, proficiency in English has become an essential skill in the field of urban studies. Future professionals in urban planning, spatial planning, and sustainable development are increasingly required to engage with scientific references, technical tools, and international experiences that are predominantly available in English.

This open day aims to raise awareness among students—especially first-year students—about the importance of English as a tool for learning, communication, and professional integration in the field of urban studies. It seeks to create a dynamic space for exchange, enabling students to discover specific vocabulary, key concepts, and practical uses of English related to city and territorial disciplines.

Through interactive workshop, thematic presentations, and adapted educational activities, participants will have the opportunity to develop their language skills while applying them to real-life situations related to urban analysis, mobility, environment, and urban planning. This approach is designed to make learning English more accessible, contextualized, and engaging. Furthermore, this initiative is part of a broader effort to strengthen students' academic and scientific openness by preparing them to access international documentation, participate in exchange programs, and engage in global professional networks.

In summary, this event represents an opportunity to promote English as an essential tool in urban studies, while encouraging students to adopt a proactive approach toward contemporary challenges of sustainable cities.
