

Islamic Finance-led Economic Transformation in Africa, the Arab Region and Beyond (IFETAA)

United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO)

IFETAA emerged from commitments made at UNIDO's World Without Hunger Conference in Addis Ababa in 2024 to expand access to finance for micro, small, and medium-sized enterprises (MSMEs). It brings together Islamic financial institutions, commercial banks, development finance institutions, governments, and the private sector to mobilize ethical, productive, and Shariah-compliant finance, alongside technical assistance and de-risking mechanisms, to drive structural transformation and shared prosperity across Africa, the Arab region, and beyond.

MSMEs are key to job-creation and poverty reduction

MSMEs account for over 90% of businesses and more than 60% of employment in developing economies. Their capacity to invest, grow and create jobs is constrained by access to affordable finance.

Yet they are cut off from capital

Only 22.9% of firms in Sub-Saharan Africa and 20.5% in MENA hold a bank loan or line of credit. Where credit exists, interest rates average 25% and collateral demands fall hardest on women.

Islamic finance bears opportunities for MSMEs

Islamic finance is well suited for underserved MSMEs because its risk-sharing and asset-backed principles reduce reliance on collateral-heavy lending and help entrepreneurs access growth capital on more equitable terms.

Islamic financial institutions and Arab banks commit to increased MSME financing

While over 70% of Islamic finance assets sit in deposits and low-risk instruments, members of the Accounting and Auditing Organization of Islamic Financial Institutions (AAOIFI) and the Union of Arab Banks (UAB) are committed to increasing their share of MSME financing.

To unlock these opportunities for MSMEs, IFETAA bridges this gap by preparing MSMEs for investment, building bankable pipelines, and offering de-risked financing opportunities to Islamic financial institutions and Arab banks, helping enterprises access affordable capital to grow, create jobs, and contribute to sustainable industrial development.
